

Xiaobo Lü

Professor Xiaobo Lü is the founding director of Columbia Global Centers | East Asia in Beijing. While in China, he was a visiting professor at Tsinghua University and a lecturer at Peking University. In 1994, Lü joined the faculty of Barnard College at Columbia University, where he teaches courses on Chinese politics, political economy and comparative politics. His research interests include post-socialist transition, corruption and good governance, regulatory reforms and government-business relations. His latest book is From Player to Referee: The Rise of the Regulatory State in China. He is the author of the book Cadres and Corruption (2000) and co-author of Danwei: Changing Chinese Workplace in Historical and Comparative Perspective (1997). In the book Taxation Without Representation in Contemporary Rural China (2003), Lü and Thomas Bernstein examined political and economic changes in the Chinese countryside. Lü is a member of the Council on Foreign Relations, the Committee of 100 and the National Committee on United States-China Relations.

Amedeo Tumolillo

Amedeo Tumolillo is an award-winning multimedia journalist with years of experience working on editorial teams in Hong Kong and New York for The New York Times. While in Asia, he ran the international home page, produced multimedia projects and helped launch a global opinion section. Most recently, Tumolillo handled user experience and multimedia projects for Spectrum, a digital publication of the Simons Foundation that serves autism researchers. He currently oversees SupChina's fast-growing editorial team, aggregating more than 50 news sources each day about China for a millennial audience. His work has been recognized by the Associated Press, E.W. Scripps and the Knight-Batten Awards for Innovations in Journalism. In 2014, he was part of the team at SFARI.org (now Spectrum) that was honored by The Webby Awards. He holds a master's degree in journalism from Northwestern University and a bachelor's degree in English from the University of Oklahoma.

Twitter: @hellotumo

Ted Wang

Ted Wang is CIO of Puissance Capital, a hedge fund focused on Chinese and American investments. In 1996, he joined Goldman Sachs, where he became a managing director in 2002, a partner in 2006 and the global cohead of the Delta One trading desk. As the most senior Chinese partner guiding the firm's strategy in China, he established extensive relationships with government officials, regulators, investors and corporate clients. Wang was a member of the Goldman Sachs Risk Committee and navigated many volatile markets. He ran Goldman's global businesses in operations, technology, credit, and legal and compliance. Prior to joining Goldman, Wang cofounded Xeotron Corp., a Texas company specializing in DNA biochips. He holds a Ph.D. in physics from the University of Minnesota, an MBA from the University of Texas, Austin, and a B.S. from Fudan University, China. He is co-chair of the board of trustees at the Museum of Chinese in America, a trustee of the China Institute, a board member of the Spence School and a member of the Committee of 100.

We would like to thank United Airlines for partnering with SupChina. The following organizations also have provided invaluable support of our launch: China Institute, Museum of Chinese in America and Shun Lee restaurants. Our gratitude goes to E.A.T. for donating the door prize.

supchina

China in 2 minutes a day

What's up, China?

In less than four decades, China has turned its economy into a $10.4 trillion behemoth whose size is second only to that of the United States. The country's actions around the globe – from investments in Africa to island-building in the South China Sea to partnerships with Hollywood studios – are shaping the economic, political and cultural orders of the 21st century.

The challenges for the nation are as big as its accomplishments. Years of rapid development have damaged its water, land and air. Dismantling government corruption is an ongoing battle. An economy trying to transform into one driven by consumers is slowing down, threatening social stability and sending tremors through other nations.

Now more than ever, China is a critical member of the global order that needs to be understood. SupChina is here to help. We'll gather, explore and explain the political, business and cultural news about the most dynamic nation on the planet.

Give us two minutes. We give you China.

Panel:

In light of China's many achievements and challenges, what is in store for the country in the years ahead? Join our esteemed panelists for an exciting discussion about China's meteoric rise, turbulent markets, volatile currency, economic transition, political dynamics, cultural influence and relationship with the world.

Bianca Bosker

Bianca Bosker is an award-winning journalist and the author of Original Copies: Architectural Mimicry in Contemporary China. She was previously the executive tech editor of The Huffington Post, where she cofounded the tech section. Her work has appeared in the The New Yorker, The Atlantic, The Wall Street Journal, The Guardian, Fast Company and other publications. She was a fellow in the East-West Center's Asia Pacific Journalism Fellowship program in 2014. Bosker won the Society of American Business Editors and Writers' award for feature writing in 2012; the Society of Professional Journalists' Sigma Delta Chi Award for online column writing in 2012; and the Society of American Business Editors and Writers' award for commentary writing in both 2012 and 2013.

Twitter: @bbosker

Soraya Darabi

Soraya Darabi is a leading startup investor and adviser. Her career began at The New York Times as the manager of social media and digital partnerships. She went on to cofound Foodspotting, which was named an "app of the year" by Apple and Wired and acquired by OpenTable. She most recently cofounded Zady, a venture-backed online retailer. She gives speeches around the world on the future of media and technology, and has been featured on the cover of Fast Company's "Most Creative People in Business" issue, as well as on the cover of Brandweek's "Best in Digital" issue. She appeared on Inc. magazine's "30 Under 30" list of entrepreneurs to watch and on Fortune's "40 Under 40" list. She is a member of the World Economic Forum's Young Global Leaders organization and a mentor with Techstars NYC.

Twitter: @SorayaDarabi

Kaiser Kuo

Kaiser Kuo is the director of international communications for Baidu, China's largest search engine. He is also the host of the Sinica Podcast, the most popular English-language podcast on current affairs in China, and guitarist for the Beijing-based metal band Chunqiu (Spring & Autumn). Kuo, a native of upstate New York, has lived in Beijing for more than 20 years. While in China, he has cofounded Tang Dynasty, China's most successful metal band; worked as editor of one of China's first online magazines; served as China bureau chief for the technology magazine Red Herring; wrote a column called "Ich Bin Ein Beijinger" for Beijing's most popular English magazine for 10 years; and has been a widely quoted observer and commentator on technology, society, culture and politics. He graduated with a degree in political science from the University of California, Berkeley, and has a master's degree in East Asian studies from the University of Arizona.

Twitter: @KaiserKuo